Division of Social and Behavioral Sciences
Assistant Professor of Psychology - Neuropsychology/Biopsychology/Research Methods

The Bloomfield College Division of Social and Behavioral Sciences seeks applications for a tenure-track faculty position at the level of Assistant Professor starting Fall 2014 (beginning in late August 2014).

Bloomfield College, founded in 1868, is an independent, four-year institution located 10 miles west of New York City in Essex County, New Jersey.

The position will involve teaching Introduction to Psychology, Biopsychology, Animal Behavior, and Statistics for the Behavioral Sciences, and Research Methods. The ideal candidate also will be able to teach courses in Sensation & Perception and Evolutionary Psychology, as well as topics related to the candidate’s research interests. Bloomfield College has a 3/3 teaching load (4 credits per course), with additional expectations for advising undergraduate majors; service to the institution, division, and discipline; and continued professional development. Minimum qualifications include evidence of effective teaching at the undergraduate level, professional development, and a doctoral degree in Psychology by August 2014.

Applicants must electronically submit (PEF format preferred) a letter of application, curriculum vitae, a statement of teaching philosophy, and three letters of recommendation with contact information (submitted directly from person writing the letter) to psychology_search@bloomfield.edu. Applications will be accepted by electronic submission only. Please, no phone calls. If selected for an interview, official graduate transcripts will be required.

Review of applications will begin immediately and will continue until position is filled.
